EXECUTIVE ORDERS:

April 23, 2007 Executive Order Number 12148 created the Federal Emergency Management Agency to interface with the Department of Defense for civil defense planning and funding. An "emergency czar" was appointed. FEMA has only spent about 6 percent of its budget on national emergencies. The bulk of their funding has been used for the construction of secret underground facilities to assure continuity of government in case of a major emergency, foreign or domestic.

Executive Order Number 12656 appointed the National Security Council as the principal body that should consider emergency powers. This allows the government to increase domestic intelligence and surveillance of U.S. citizens and would restrict the freedom of movement within the United States and grant the government the right to isolate large groups of civilians. The National Guard could be federalized to seal all borders and take control of U.S. air space and all ports of entry.

Executive Order 10990 allows the government to take over all modes of transportation and control of highways and seaports.

Executive Order 10995 allows Seizure of all communications media in the United States.

Executive Order 10997 allows Seizure of a all electric power fuels and minerals, public and private.

Executive Order 10998 allows the government to take over all food resources and farms.

Executive Order 10999 allows Seizure of all means of transportation, including personal cars, trucks or vehicles of any kind and total control of highways, seaports and waterways.

Executive Order 11000 allows Seizure of all American people for work forces under federal supervision including the splitting of families if the government finds it necessary.

Executive Order 11001 allows seizure of all health, education and welfare facilities, public and private.

Executive Order 11002 empowered the postmaster general to register all men, women and children in the U.S.

Executive Order 11003 allows seizure of all airports and aircraft.

Executive Order 11004 allows seizure of all housing and finance authorities to establish Forced Relocation Designated areas to be abandoned as "unsafe."

Executive Order 11005 allows seizure of all railroads, inland waterways and storage facilities, public and private.

Executive Order 11051 specifies the responsibility of the Office of Emergency Planning and gives authorization to put all Executive Orders into effect in times of increased international tensions and economic or financial crisis.

Executive Order 11921 allows the Federal Emergency Preparedness Agency to develop plans to establish control over the mechanisms of production and distribution, of energy sources, wages, salaries, credit and the flow of money in U.S. financial institution in any undefined national emergency. It also provides that when a state of emergency is declared by the President, Congress cannot review the action for six months.

Executive Order 12919 otherwise known as National Defense Industrial Resources Preparedness, was signed by William Jefferson Clinton on June 4, 1994, and released on June 6, 1994. EO 12919 making the President a virtual dictator in war or peace.

We have come to be one of the worst ruled, one of the most completely controlled governments in the civilized world -- no longer a government of free opinion, no longer a government by... a vote of the majority, but a government by the opinion and duress of a small group of dominant men.

"Some of the biggest men in the United States, in the field of commerce and manufacture, are afraid of something. They know there is a power so organized, so subtle, so watchful, so interlocked, so complete, so pervasive, that they had better not speak above their breath when they speak in condemnation of it." -- President Woodrow Wilson

1. Elitist Paradigm

The humans of this planet are constrained in many ways; this subjugation results in our inability to comprehend who we really are.

Before we discuss the larger reality as presented by ETs and celestials, you must decide if these constraints really exist, and whether or not you wish to deal with them. First let me outline the elitist paradigm to describe the current situation in the United States.

Much of what is said here applies to other countries as well. A flat on Central Park, a ranch in Montana, a house in Aspen, a yacht anchored along the Cote d'Azur, a Citation VI, financial accounts around the world, and a trophy wife are the marks of today's elites. They are defined by their accumulation of wealth. In the United States, the top 1% of families control 33% of its wealth; the bottom 40% of the population owns less than 1%. Hidden within elites' extravagant trappings and percentages, a closely-knit group of super elites controls governments and economies. To them, wealth is more than a lavish lifestyle, or a route to power; complete control of the planet and control of us are their ultimate goals. They are sometimes referred to as the Illuminati.

Lower tier elites are the public faces of the elitist paradigm, the billionaires, the politicians, and the stars of sports and Hollywood. These elites are those against which the populace directs its anger, or are those held up for adulation. As elites congregate in their gated communities, they separate themselves from their fellow man, and with this separation eliminate the ability to have a real relationship with the majority of their Earthly brothers and sisters. Not that the elites would want such a relationship, for they see the other members of the human race as merely resources to be used for their advancement and comfort.

Oh yes, some of them are philanthropists, but none of the elites would ever dream of relinquishing the way they live. Perhaps the most telling perspective on elites is the security services they employ to "protect" themselves and their property. Speeding past places in which poverty, starvation and death are a way of life is a mere inconvenience to a sightseeing trip. Places where Earth is being ripped apart, in order to bring elites the necessities of the good life, are unfortunate requirements. "I wonder what the common people are doing," is their refrain over a crystal goblet of rare wine. These are the lifestyles of the rich and famous that are glamorized in our mainstream books and movies, lifestyles that the rest of us are programmed to idolize.

In "The Great Turning," David Korten states that, "Those who control the stories that define the culture of a society, control its politics and economy." The above sketches of elites define the American pyramid; other countries have their own stories. In each, stories provide the framework for a pyramid, a socio-economic system that works to dominate the majority for the benefit of the few.

Stories about famous people define a reality that common men and women are supposed to admire. Stories of our history define who we are today in terms of our ancestors. Stories about science and medicine define limits on our physical abilities. Stories and songs about military victories define a world in which war is justified. Fears generated by war tend to unite a populace behind a government, even an unpopular one. Wars are ostensibly fought for a variety of good reasons.

However, on closer examination, usually long after the events, it usually comes out that the political or economic gain went to members of the elite. The lives lost and damaged were merely the price of their winnings. It is not uncommon to find the same elitist interests clandestinely funding both sides of a conflict. There are many interlaced structures within the elitist paradigm: government, military, legal, financial, corporations, medicine, energy, psychology, education and media. Each of these provides a service or product to the populace; each began with the best of intentions to serve specific needs; each has been infiltrated and corrupted in order to serve the wealth and power of the super elites.

Without giving it much thought, most of us accept this socio-economic pyramid. This is, after all, how things have been going for thousands of years. Since the dawn of recorded history, the physical power wielded by kings, tyrants, and rulers has been used to dominate the majority, to "keep them in line." The few, who by reason of birth, wealth or physical prowess, rule a piece of the pie, pay homage to those at the top of the pyramid.

The following list of experiments carried out without the permission of those upon whom they were performed speaks for itself about the callous attitude of elitist institutions toward us.

- * 1931: Rockefeller Institute for Medical Investigations infects human subjects with cancer cells.
- * 1950: U.S. Navy sprays a cloud of bacteria from ships over San Francisco.
- * 1956: U.S. military releases mosquitoes infected with Yellow Fever over Avon Park, FL.
- * 1965: MK Ultra program to manipulate human behavior using mind control.
- * 1970: Molecular biology techniques are used to produce AIDS-like retroviruses.
- * 1981: First cases of AIDS are confirmed in homosexual men in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco.
- * 1987: Department of Defense admits that, despite a treaty banning research and development of biological agents, it continues to operate research facilities at 127 facilities and universities around the nation.

* 2001: Anthrax, traced to a government laboratory, is mailed to members of the U. S. Congress.

Our government is supposed to represent the will of the people. However, according to R. Buckminster Fuller, "The U.S.A. is not run by its would-be 'democratic government.' Nothing could be more pathetic than the role that has to be played by the President of the United States, whose power is approximately zero." Quotes like these from knowledgeable people should lead us to ask, "Who is running things?"

The quote from President Woodrow Wilson at the beginning of this chapter, a quote from almost a century ago, should give each of us cause for concern about a shadow government, about the elitist paradigm. Some of the answers can be found in organizations such as the Council on Foreign Relations and in secret societies such as the Bilderbergers.

In his book, "Rule by Secrecy," Jim Marrs traces the role of secret societies as far back as Egypt, and shows how their counterparts are the real power behind our modern civilization. Other researchers, such as Zecharia Sitchin, point out that beings from the stars founded Earth's earliest civilization and an elitist power structure to dominate it. These themes run through all secret societies.

The elitist paradigm is not about political parties; it is about seeing people as basically bad and needing to be controlled. Once we move beyond this basic assumption, we can find a path to a more enlightened way to live. My observations are not to deny the good about the United States. America offers advantages not found in other countries. But what would this country be like if no one was seeking to dominate? Can we preserve what is good without competition, without greed, without judgment, without secrets and manipulation? Can we re-create our society based on cooperation, acceptance and love? What would human civilization on this planet look like if no one were seeking to dominate, if there were no elites? What would it take to bring all of us into a design where everyone is valued, everyone is treated equally, where there is no socio-economic pyramid?

Questions for Chapter 1:

1. How have stories formed your view of reality?
2. In what ways are you connected to the elitist paradigm?
3. What are your feelings about people of privilege?
4. Do you believe there are such things as secret societies? What powers do they possess?
5. Is war justified?
6. Do you believe it is possible to create a new kind of civilization?
