

Cosmic Paradigm Newsletter
By Mark Kimmel
December 28, 2007

Dear Friends,

Make plans to join the rest of us at dawn, or as early as possible in the morning, of January 1st (and the first day of each month thereafter).

WE HAVE BEEN ASKED TO BECOME THE ARCHITECTS OF OUR FUTURE BY SPELLING OUT WHAT WE WISH OUR PLANET TO BECOME. BECAUSE OF EARTH'S UNIQUE MAJESTY AND BECAUSE WE ARE A UNIQUE COMBINATION OF RACES FROM AROUND THE GALAXY, OUR FUTURE ON THIS PLANET WILL BE ONE OF A KIND.

Our brothers and sisters from many star systems stand ready to assist us in birthing the benign civilization on this planet -- like nothing we have known before. But it is up to us, collectively, to determine our uniqueness.

So join us in meditation on the 1st to transmit your wishes in an outpouring of truth, love and joy.

(Many of us focus on this daily, and anyone who wishes can join in.)

Best wishes for 2008,

Mark Kimmel

P.S. The material below gives ideas for what we can expect in 2008. Make up your own mind as to what resonates with you.

My latest book, "Birthing a New Civilization," is available at <http://www.cosmicparadigm.com/AboutBirthing.htm> In it you will find much more of what I am communicating in these newsletters.

Message from Matthew December 23, 2007 =====

MATTHEW: I bring you loving greetings from the heavenly hosts! How we wish you could hear the music of the spheres as you celebrate the holiday season-- if everyone on Earth could hear these tones of celestial magnificence, your world would be instantly transformed into a planet of love and peace. Hark--that is coming! We are rejoicing as we view the vestiges of negativity on Earth being transmuted into light and the buds of long-awaited changes beginning to blossom in fullness.

For ages the tap root of deeply entrenched darkness on Earth was hidden. When that core of the system was shaken loose in recent decades, its far flung roots tried to hold firm its secret mooring. Then those roots started shaking too and became a possible threat to the viability of the whole system. Over the years, the threat grew into a probability, then the actuality, and now the once titanic tap root with its flourishing widespread network is flailing in death throes, its withering tendrils futilely trying to escape the light's brilliance. This is an allegorical depiction of the changing nature and lot of Earth humankind, changes that are being observed with growing excitement throughout the universe.

Down to Earth, the mixture of emotions during this season always is heightened. Whether celebrating religions' holy days or secular festivities, the collective spirit of people with family and friends glows like billions of candles burning brightly. On a level that is not obvious to you, but is a great part of the light intensity generated, is the radiance we see in your sharing, caring and compassion for the masses of souls who are alone, homeless, grieving, in combat zones or hospitals, or enduring near intolerable hardships, and for whom this season is but a sorrowful reminder of better times. More so than ever before in your history, the outpouring of loving energy for these ones is in such abundance that our hearts are singing in exaltation!

Now for an overview of what you will see during your calendar year 2008 as undeniable evidence that the patterns of behavior and systems of the old ways are tumbling to make way for the new. Disclosures in mainstream media--where truth still is sparse in the plethora of omissions and misleading information--are only the tip of exposures so plentiful that when they come out, it will seem more like an eruption than an emergence as peoples demand an end to pervasive corruption and oppression. Yet, be mindful that what is transpiring is reformation, not revolution, and although changes ultimately will be profound, they will come within the just laws and orderliness of a civilized society and not the untenable disarray of anarchical upheaval.

All happenings are due to the frequencies Earth has reached in her ascension. The raising of consciousness and spiritual clarity enabled by these higher vibrations is reason to leap with joy, but in the short term, some effects may be unsettling. Physical anomalies, depression, fatigue and confusion may be due to bodies adjusting, but please do not assume that is the cause of discomfort. Proper treatment may be necessary, so consulting trusted health care specialists and using natural remedies is sensible, but chemicals prescribed to calm you down or cheer you up will only create more havoc with your systems' electromagnetic currents, which are incompatible with those chemicals. Assist your bodies by drinking a lot of pure water.

Another noticeable effect of the frequencies is changing attitudes and behavior as all characteristics and emotions are being magnified -- in easiest terms, "good" is getting better and "bad" is getting worse. Positive outlooks and characteristics are blooming beautifully, enhancing relationships in families, workplaces and communities. Conversely, the veneers of acquired traits like diplomacy and feigned philanthropy are wearing thin and the less admirable basic nature is showing, just as will all instances of falsity and self-service.

In a similar vein but from a different source, hearts and minds are stirring with sensations that changes are needed in personal relationships, type of work or living environment, or perhaps a complete change of lifestyle. These usually derive from strong soul level nudgings to get on with other choices in the pre-birth agreements that require different circumstances from those already experienced.

Planetary cleansing via earthquakes and storms will continue until Earth is rid of the negativity amassed over the ages of brutality and bloodshed, thus it is wise to be prepared with sufficient typical emergency supplies to weather these kinds of events. Please remember that soul contracts are what govern physical safety and survival--do not let fear be the motivator for moving to a "safer" location. Do not let fear into your lives at all! This is a good place to mention that "global warming" is Earth's return to the predominantly moderate climate that once prevailed worldwide.

From a variety of obvious causes, many, many souls will continue to transition from Earth to spirit life, and with each one's departure, grief and missing the physical presence will befall family and friends. One day not too distant, when telepathic communication again will be commonplace on Earth, everyone will know that the leave-taking is by the soul's choice in agreement with all primary persons in that lifetime and LIFE is an unending cycle of incarnations, then residence in a spirit world, within eternal love bonds.

Despite the highly publicized war-mongering rhetoric that is meant more to arouse fear than to undertake action, armed conflicts will ease, then cease as bellicose national leaders are ousted and lighted souls step in to govern in peace. Peoples will start enjoying the liberties and better living standards so long denied them, and a cooperative spirit of working in harmony for the good of all will replace current conflict, anger, jealousy and ruthlessness. This too will be a transition, not godliness blanketing the planet in one fell swoop, and patience a bit longer will serve you well.

The unconscionable inequality between rich and poor is coming to an end as the global foundation for financial dealings that has caused this disparity is coming apart at the seams. The largely unrecognized bankruptcy of the United States unavoidably will have domino effects, and the economies of many other nations already are in tatters. When all of this stabilizes, you will have a sound basis for commerce and banking, the lives of billions now in bare subsistence level countries will be greatly improved, and the vast coffers of those who earned their fortunes dishonestly will be fairly distributed to end impoverishment wherever it exists.

Contrary to reports that benevolent members of our universal family will make mass landings to evacuate peoples of Earth, that will not occur because there will be no need. However, their ongoing massive assistance in a variety of ways will continue, and when it is safe for those living among you to introduce themselves and those surrounding you in spacecraft to land, they will. Not only will that be a time of unequaled celebration on Earth, but all lighted civilizations in the universe will be cheering when that monumental day arrives!

Now then, the lapse in my messages was intended to coincide with my mother's move. Although that has been delayed, she has been spending this time in other spiritual information avenues, and we thank all readers who refrained from writing emails and letters. To those who did write their hope that messages would soon resume and included good wishes for her move, we appreciate your thoughtfulness. But more significant to the point I need to make is the large number of individuals who wrote such as "I know he says we need to ask within, but I'm not getting answers and I really need his helpful messages" and "Please! We count on Matthew's information to get us through these chaotic times."

The absence of my messages had a purpose aside from my mother's anticipated need for time, and that purpose is most evident in the sentiments expressed in those verbatim examples. Despite our urging to the contrary, some of you still are relying on external sources to tell you what to think or feel or do. By no means am I the only source of enlightening and encouraging information, but a difference is that not all other messages from light beings address readers' questions, and I recognize the merit in this.

Please remember that in previous messages I have told you that my intention is to inspire you to develop your innate ability to discern truth from falsehood and learn to trust your intuition, and I offered suggestions to assist you to achieve this essential aspect of spiritual evolvement. Those words are in bold italics to stress how crucial it is that you not delay in developing these key aspects of self--you have the capacity to do this and all you need is the will to use it.

I also have said that by continuing to provide the answers that are within you, I was diminishing instead of stimulating your incentive to grow as you must; yet continue I did because you kept asking. I think my responses to some kinds of questions totally missed the mark--to show that cluttering your thoughts with trivial issues or succumbing to fear with each dire prediction forms a barrier to raising your consciousness and attaining spiritual clarity. And I could have been more emphatic about this too: Earth's journey to her destination is assured but yours isn't; it's your responsibility get on that same track.

By making every effort I could think of to impart what you need to know, I don't feel that I have failed, but neither do I feel that I have fully succeeded. So I have been pondering what I can do to ignite the spark of your self-discovery of the powerful gods and goddesses you are, and the recurring thought is "tough love." Because it is not my nature to be harsh or abrupt, but rather as helpful as can be within universal laws -- this is true of all souls in lighted spirit worlds--I knew that applying tough love would not come naturally. But in practicing on my mother, I've seen that it can be effective. Ever since we started talking nearly 14 years ago, I have been telling her that she needs to drink more water--she becomes engrossed in the task at hand, thinks "as soon as I finish this," and simply keeps forgetting. Not long ago she became much more diligent without my prodding, after I told her once again about water. I knew her thought, of course, and I said, "No, I don't get tired of reminding you, I get tired of your ignoring me."

I think God must feel like that when his children repeatedly ignore The Word he sent by souls who then spread it throughout the land. Lamentably, down through the ages The Word has been distorted by those with influence, who cast out the truths and inserted information that served their purposes of greed and control. Now God-appointed messengers from the lighted realms are transmitting The Word to his receivers on Earth to waken his sleeping children in this unprecedented era on your homeland planet. A message of timeless importance in God's own words is well worth your reading and rereading. [August 1, 2007 www.matthewbooks.com]

Now I will tell you something that is not in that message, an alert he gave my mother about a month ago. It was not to scare her, but to inform her that tentacles with dark attachments are lashing out more ferociously than ever before in energy alignment with the thoughts and deeds of the recalcitrant souls, the darkly-inclined ones whose behavior is increasingly irrational and desperate as they are acting out their fear. Since the low frequencies being emitted cannot penetrate strong psyches and spirits, they are attacking through anyone and anything that can affect those who are holding their light steady--as beacons for others, they also are major targets for the darkness. God said this accounted for several recent unlikely occurrences in my mother's home that caused inconvenience and expense--everything is energy, and tentacles with either light or dark attachments can and do affect inanimate things.

But most important, God told her, is that she must be keenly aware of her surroundings and take utmost care in all her undertakings. Because I am ever present, I know she felt that she always is cautious; however, she was not prepared for the new force of attack, and two days later her finger was severely slashed. She was using it as she usually did to hold open a special door for dogs so the little blind fellow could enter, and suddenly the largest dog flung herself at the door, which nearly severed part of that finger. Later I told my mother that a dark tentacle had "spooked" Jessie and why: How better to silence a voice that speaks through a computer keyboard?

My mother, like all other dedicated lightworkers, is protected by the Christed light, and although God's countless emissaries are ever vigilant over all of you, none may prevent something that would interfere with your choices. You must not only wisely take precautions in major endeavors, but also be alert to potential harmful effects of minor ones. Because of that injury, my mother is more safely helping the little dog exit and enter, and although she could have used this way all along, she didn't think it was necessary to do anything differently. God's message to her applies "across the board," so extrapolate here and let her experience stir you to expand your awareness and thus your safe being.

When I spoke of "tough love," I wasn't referring to a sensible suggestion like that, which comes from the tender caring of the unconditional love that all souls at this station feel for all of you. Tough love means that no longer will I answer questions that are basically curiosity: Will so-and-so be the next US president, will President Bush be impeached, which world leaders are dark and which are light, will Iran be invaded, where is the economy heading, when will the war in Iraq end, how far will the new virus spread, what will stop the chemtrails, what if . . . ? Please understand that I am NOT saying these matters are not important--they are!--and it would be a most exceptional soul who could ask within and get accurate answers.

There are two important issues here. First, in a sense, you have been given answers to those questions and many others--the descriptions of the promised Golden Age that other evolved souls and I have given you clearly show that any momentary concerns about such matters are unnecessary. Second, Earth's energy field of potential is rife with countless zigzagging streamers, and although the finale--the Golden Age--is known, all free will choices with their positive or negative charges shooting out into that field every nanosecond preclude our knowing the absolute outcome of each energetic expression. Energy is in constant motion so situations are ever in flux, and what in this moment appears likely, tomorrow may have lost its punch, or vice versa.

But the primary point I need to make is, a forecast of specific matters that in time you shall see for yourselves as they unfold is not what needs to be paramount in your thoughts--knowing and BEing the souls you are, IS! You could say that "introducing you to yourselves" is and always has been my purpose. Going on more about this would merely be repeating what I have said in many messages.

Again, they are not the only source of enlightenment, encouragement and guidance, but reviewing them could be helpful as refresher courses generally are. However, I know that with linear time racing right out of the picture and the same myriad responsibilities must be accomplished, most of you may not be able to do that. Furthermore, I would be remiss if I did not stress here one more time the "other side of the coin" from dependence on external sources to carry you along on Earth's journey, and I state with brevity that belies the inestimable honor we pay you: You are brilliant souls who, simply by radiating your light, are inspiring others to let their own light come to the fore!

It is important to repeat as well something else I often have said, that each of you is a manifesting powerhouse and what you manifest not only is your very life, but affects Earth and the universe. In line with this is the "2012" chapter in And then God said...then I said...then He said..., a book of extraordinary messages received by my mother and by Celestial Bluestar of the Pleiades and David of Arcturus, powerful light warriors with vital missions during this unique time in your world. As God instructed, "2012" is pertinent excerpts from my messages, and I asked my mother to separately post that chapter as space limitations preclude adding it here. ["2012" in Matthew's Messages on www.matthewbooks.com] You "live in the now," as your expression goes, where in each moment you are co-creating your "future." This is precisely why you chose this Earth lifetime and this is what needs to be foremost in your thoughts, your feelings, your actions! I believe that reading "2012" not only will be exciting as you visualize your co-creation, but it will remind you that you are eminently prepared for this transitional phase at hand.

Now, by request, I speak for all souls in spirit and in body at this station of spiritual evolvment: Our abiding love for every one of you shines like all the stars in the heavens--let our love lighten, guide and uplift your pathway, knowing that you and we are eternally ONE.

MERRY CHRISTMAS and HAPPY NEW YEAR

A PROPHETIC MESSAGE FOR THE NEW YEAR

by Richard Moore author of
ESCAPING THE MATRIX

Friends,

Up until December 3rd, it was very difficult to predict what might happen in 2008. We had every sign that a nuclear attack was being prepared for Iran. There was talk of the neocons declaring a national emergency, suspending the Constitution, and cancelling the next election. Basically, the neocons seemed to be out of control, deranged almost, and we didn't know what might be coming our way.

On December 3rd, when the National Intelligence Estimate was made public, declaring that Iran has no nuclear weapons program, it immediately became apparent that the Iran attack was off, simplifying the picture a bit. In the ensuing days, by watching how Bush was responding to the new circumstance, it became apparent the cancellation of the Iran project was not something that was wanted by the White House. Higher ups had made the decision. As subsequent events have unfolded, it becomes clear that more than Iran was cancelled. The whole neocon program is being rapidly reined in.

I talked about these things in great detail in an earlier posting, "dialog on recent themes". But that analysis didn't try to anticipate very much about the next administration, except in broad strokes. I think the picture is now beginning to come into focus. It took me a while to put the pieces back together again, after the December 3rd announcement shook up the table a bit.

I think we can see the focus of the next administration by watching Al Gore. He's going around preaching the gospel of climate change, and that is rapidly becoming the new cause celebre for the 'international community'. It's more than a campaign by Gore, we're seeing a campaign being supported by the mass media, by the powers that be. We are clearly being prepared for a 'new show', after the 'Bush show', and the 'new show' is going to be about carbon taxes and credits, new energy sources, more efficient cars, biofuels, and all those other things that are allegedly related to climate change and peak oil.

In order to clear the way for the new show, it seems pretty clear that the new administration will begin with some easy political wins, by rapidly cleaning up some of the obvious messes left by the neocons. Closing down Guantanamo, and declaring that rendition flights have been abandoned, would gain a lot of points at no real cost (secret flights and prisons would undoubtedly continue). Iraq has already been destabilized and prepared for balkanization, and permanent US bases have already been built. Another easy win will be for US troops to withdraw to their bases and the oil fields, for the war to be declared over, and for Iraq to be split up into ethnic provinces, leaving them to squabble among themselves. It can all be portrayed in the media as a 'victory for peace and democracy'.

What then, can we expect from this new show? What consequences are likely to follow from implementing the kind of policies that Al Gore and the media have been talking about, around climate change, energy independence, etc.?

At a general level, it is clear that those kinds of policies do not involve fundamental changes in how our societies operate. We'll still have cars, only they might be a bit more efficient, and we'll be paying more for fuel and taxes to operate them. We'll still be shipping products from China that we could produce locally, and we'll still be depending on long-distance trucking. We'll still be using agricultural methods that are highly petroleum-dependent, for tractors, fertilizers, and pesticides. Research and development of new energy sources will lead to lots of government subsidies, and it may get us a bit more energy, but not nearly enough to replace petroleum. As long as our transport and other infrastructures remain basically unchanged, we remain unsustainable, dependent on petroleum, and none of the Gore-like initiatives change the overall energy picture, carbon picture, or climate picture in any significant way.

On the face of it then, the whole new show is destined to fail. Climate change will not be alleviated and peak oil will loom as alarmingly as ever, albeit postponed for a bit. Are we to assume then that our new leaders are stupid? I have found that the presumption of 'government incompetence' is seldom a useful assumption in evaluating the behavior of governments. We only reach such a conclusion if we take their official rhetoric at face value. In terms of 'achieving democracy', the official rhetoric, Bush has been 'incompetent' in Iraq. But in terms of the real agenda -- building permanent bases and controlling the oil -- he has in fact been successful. I have found that this is always the pattern: some real agenda is always being achieved by the policies in force, despite the apparent bungling in terms of the official agenda.

In order to begin figuring out what the 'real agenda' is, behind Gore-like policies, let's look first at one example: biofuels. Producing biofuels does give us another energy source, but it also removes land from food production. As a consequence of the already-existing biofuels market, market prices for grain and other potential biofuels are now being driven by energy prices. Global food prices are therefore rising rapidly, while at the same time food-production acreage is being reduced. These two things will directly and drastically increase world hunger, particularly in the poorest regions. A Gore-inspired administration will be promoting an expansion of biofuel programs on a global scale, and it will be patting itself on the back for its noble energy-saving deeds.

All of this will be occurring in a context where we are facing a global food crisis generally. We haven't seen many headlines on this topic, but the world is sitting on the brink of a major food crisis. Emergency stockpiles are at low ebb, production levels are down, crop failures are up, etc. It's a very nasty picture.

In this context, the net consequence of a major biofuel agenda comes down to intentional genocide. In order to provide marginally more fuel to the over-consuming industrialized nations, untold millions will starve in the third world, in addition to those untold millions that are already starving. The marginal energy gain is so small by comparison, that we must accept that the biofuels agenda is PRIMARILY about genocide. However when we begin reading about new famines breaking out, perhaps in Brazil where biofuels are now going into massive production, the headlines will blame it on droughts, or crop failures, or some other excuse, as they always do. We will meanwhile feel a 'green glow' every time we fill up our Prius with biofuels, unaware of what damage we are doing. And perhaps we'll donate to Oxfam, or adopt some third world child and send them letters.

An Gore agenda is simply genocidal imperialism hiding under a new mask, a new show. Instead of killing off the Indians by killing their buffalo, it kills off populations by removing their access to food in other ways. Once again, 'they' must be sacrificed so that 'our' way of life can continue and expand. We might note here that more Iraqis died under Bill Clinton's sanctions than have been killed in the current Iraq war. In Bill Clinton's time the pattern was invisible genocide, rather than the more violent Bush variety. Apparently in Hillary Clinton's time we are to return to that earlier invisible pattern.

Clearly the consequences of a Gore agenda are genocidal, but one might question whether that is a primary intended outcome. I've been suggesting that it is, and I think more elaboration is in order on that point. I haven't made the case very well yet, I've merely presented some of the evidence and suggested a pattern. In order to get a proper perspective on this issue, we need to step back a bit, and consider the bigger picture of the industrialized world vis a vis the third world, in the face of a broad range of mounting resource shortages.

It seems very clear that the industrialized nations have no intention of changing the basic path they are on. More industrial growth, more energy consumption, continued use of energy-intensive agricultural methods, etc. The energy band-aids of a Gore agenda make no significant difference in this picture, they simply proclaim the intention to proceed with business as usual.

The only way the industrialized North can continue on this path is by taking over more and more of the third world's resources for its own use. As the industrial appetite for resources continues to grow at a rapid rate, and as our global resources are increasingly stressed, we are going to see a very rapid expansion of third world hunger and starvation -- the globalization of African-scale famines. This is inevitable while the North stays on this basic path, whether we have Gore-like policies or some other set of policies is of little consequence.

This 'inevitability' of mass die-offs in the third world is well known to those who run the industrial nations, the ones who give us alternate versions of Clinton and Bush to be our leaders and set our temporary agendas. From the perspective of the heights of power, the question becomes, "How can we manage these die-offs so that they cause the least disruption in the global economy, and so that they don't arouse too much public outcry?" Of course once you begin managing die-offs, then you are engaging in genocide, ie, arranging for particular populations to die in preference to others.

The pattern for the management strategy has been made very clear in Sub-Saharan Africa, where all those civil wars, genocidal atrocities, droughts, and famines have been occurring. Not many people realize that these disasters have been systematically imposed on Africa, by means of IMF requirements, covert destabilization programs, the widespread distribution of modern weapons, the manipulations of international banks, the dedication of agricultural land to Northern consumption, and the list goes on. Not only is Africa being starved to death by market forces, but the process is being accelerated by covert genocidal interventions.

In Africa we see a full-scale Holocaust, a massive genocide program in process, or should I say we see it not. For in the media it's nothing like that. We read that 'tribal conflicts have flared up', but we don't hear about the two CIA bombings that were each blamed on the 'other side', and which ignited the fracas, a fracas that could become a civil war. We read about a famine due to 'drought', and we aren't told that there would be plenty of water if it weren't for all the coffee-export plantations using up the local water. We don't see genocide, we see Africans befallen with unfortunate miseries, all due to the vagaries of Mother Nature.

Thus the pattern of managing die-offs becomes clear. It has been tested satisfactorily in Africa, and we can expect the proven pattern to be employed in future. They pick a population that they consider 'redundant', they undertake a program of acquiring that population's resources, and then to speed up the process of removal they engage in various covert acts of genocide. In this way the world's population can be whittled down piecemeal, and manageably, as the North gradually requires the utilization of ALL the world's resources for its own exclusive use. Unfortunately for the North, even that won't be enough to enable industrial growth to continue. The South is being killed off only that the unsustainable North can continue as it is a wee bit longer.

Meanwhile, the media in the North paints a picture in which only nature causes famines, and the role of the North is always to provide aid, to the extent it can. Concerned viewers are given convenient numbers to call, so they can dispel their concern with a simple donation that will 'save a child', or 'give a family a goat'. No genocide around here; we're the good guys. See no evil, feel just fine. By the way, too bad about those famines over there.

The Gore-style policies are not just genocidal, they are formidably genocidal. When they start taking massive amounts of land out of food production, and bring about a substantial increase in global food prices, in the face of an already stressed world food situation, they could bring about in a very short time -- one harvest season -- famine on a scale we have never seen before. How serious the outcome is depends entirely on how aggressively the new administration pursues the Gore-style agenda. They've got genocide down to a science, with tunable parameters.

Apparently, having field tested Holocaust tactics in Sub-Saharan Africa, a decision has been made to go global with the program. For this purpose, the Gore-style policies have the potential to be the appropriate Weapon of Mass Destruction, the equivalent in the starvation game to nukes in the kill-by-fire game. This decision to go global was evidently made some time ago, no doubt just before Gore was asked to make "An Inconvenient Truth". The film was the first signal of which way the winds were going to blow, the first preview of the 'new show'.

The primary mission of the Hillary administration, under the banners of 'doing something about climate change and peak oil', will evidently be to undertake a massive resource grab in the global South, leading to the selective and massive elimination of certain populations through starvation. In other words, the mission is to expand the starving-Africa model globally, a process that will presumably be helped along by the usual shadowy suspects in their usual destabilizing roles.

My big fear with the Bush regime was the likely attack on Iran...or was it the unleashing of the Gestapo? It was a close race in those dark days. Now we are on the verge of a regime bent on genocide on a scale that would put the Nazis to shame. I suggest that we have escaped the kettle only to fall into the frying pan.

I hope no one out there has any romantic notions about the new administration, and I hope everyone realizes that the political process can never be used to solve our problems; that system is in fact the heart of our problem. I also hope it is clear to everyone that global genocide is an inevitable consequence of the continuation of this insane capitalist system, whether you agree with most of my analysis or not. And in the end, capitalism can't last anyway.

Only when you have reached that deep level of hopelessness, where you see no avenue of escape, can you clear your mind enough to begin to see where the real problem lies. The real problem lies, my friends, in the fact that you and I have nothing to say about how our societies are run. Any one of us has more sense than the people who are running things, and we certainly have our fellow beings more at heart. Our problem lies in our own powerlessness, leaving power in the hands of those who always abuse it, in one way or another, in one age after another.

Our challenge as a sentient species, and our response if we seek to do anything about the growth-thru-genocide agenda, is to begin to empower ourselves, us ordinary people, without reference to the useless political process. How to pursue our empowerment must be the aim of our investigations, and pursuing that empowerment must be the point of our activism.

happy new year, happy empowerment, rkm
